Washington football team 2021 mock draft 7 rounds

Round 2 | Picks 33-48 33. Jacksonville Jaguars: Treylon Burks, WR, Arkansas 34. Detroit Lions: Alec Pierce, WR, Cincinnati 35. New York Jets: Chad Muma, LB, Wyoming 36. New York Giants: Trey McBride, TE, Colorado State 37. Houston Texans: Trent McDuffie, CB, Washington 38. New York Jets (from CAR): Jalen Tolbert, WR, South Alabama 39. Chicago Bears: Jahan Dotson, WR, Penn State 40. Denver Broncos: Boye Mafe, EDGE, Minnesota 41. Seattle Seahawks: Roger McCreary, CB, Auburn 42. Washington Football Team: Jaquan Brisker, S, Penn State 43. Atlanta Falcons: Matt Corral, QB, Ole Miss 44. Cleveland Browns: Sam Williams, EDGE, Ole Miss 45. Baltimore Ravens: Trevor Penning, OT, Northern Iowa 46. Minnesota Vikings: Jermaine Johnson II, EDGE, Florida State 47. Indianapolis Colts: Martin Emerson, CB, Mississippi State 48. Los Angeles Chargers: Logan Hall, DL, Houston Round 2 | Picks 49-64 49. New Orleans Saints: David Bell, WR, Purdue 50. Miami Dolphins: Kenneth Walker III, RB, Michigan State 51. Philadelphia Eagles: John Metchie III, WR, Alabama 52. Pittsburgh Steelers: Nicholas Petit-Frere, OT, Ohio State 53. Las Vegas Raiders: Phidarian Mathis, DT, Alabama 54. New England Patriots: Quay Walker, LB, Georgia 55. Arizona Cardinals: Zion Johnson, G, Boston College 56. Dallas Cowboys: Travis Jones, DT, Connecticut 57. Buffalo Bills: Brecee Hall, RB, Iowa State 58. Atlanta Falcons (from TEN): Kyler Gordon, CB, Washington 59. Green Bay Packers: Cameron Thomas, EDGE, San Diego State 60. Tampa Bay Buccaneers: Isaiah Spiller, RB, Texas A&M 61. San Francisco 49ers: Drake Jackson, EDGE, USC 62. Cincinnati Bengals: Perrion Winfrey, DT, Oklahoma 63. Denver Broncos (from DEN): Abraham Lucas, OT, Washington State 64. Kansas City Chiefs: Christian Watson, WR, North Dakota State We're on to Round 2 in this 2022 NFL Mock Draft, starting with selections 33 through 48. 33. Jacksonville Jaguars: Treylon Burks, WR, Arkansas There have been reports from PFN Chief Draft Analyst Tony Pauline that Treylon Burks hasn't looked great in pre-draft workouts. If he has trouble keeping his weight in check, that could push him down a bit. In Round 2, however, he's a great value with his upside. 34. Detroit Lions: Alec Pierce, WR, Cincinnati You don't usually see Alec Pierce this high, but the Cincinnati WR has early-round talent. He has a great size profile and complements it with efficient footwork as a route runner, explosiveness upfield, and great catching instincts. He and Amon-Ra St. Brown would make an excellent tandem. 35. New York Jets: Chad Muma, LB, Wyoming The Jets shouldn't discriminate when it comes to improving their defense. Aside from the interior line, it can all be upgraded. Chad Muma, with his size and range in the box, as well as his positional versatility at the second level, makes a lot of sense on Day 2. 36. New York Giants: Trey McBride, TE, Colorado State The Senior Bowl is Trey McBride's chance to proclaim himself the top tight end in the 2022 NFL Draft. He'll have some competition, but few can match the Colorado State product's sheer consistency in both phases. He'd be a valuable asset for Jones in New York. 37. Houston Texans: Trent McDuffie, CB, Washington The Texans are that team that auto-drafts every year — but their roster is so thin they can basically use whoever they get. Especially at cornerback, Trent McDuffie has a lot of appeal. He's instinctive and plays with urgency, but he should test out of this world at the combine as well. 38. New York Jets (from CAR): Jalen Tolbert, WR, South Alabama When he's on, it's hard not to like Jalen Tolbert's game. The 6'3", 190-pound Jaguars star accounted for almost 50% of his team's receiving production in 2021. He can separate and stack defensive backs, but his body control and ball-tracking ability are what will truly win over Zach Wilson. 39. Chicago Bears: Jahan Dotson, WR, Penn State Operation Save Justin Fields remains a go, even with the Bears' hiring of defensive head coach Matt Eberflus. Jahan Dotson is arguably the best player on the board here with his three-level ability. A combination of Dotson and Darnell Mooney is a nightmare for opposing defenses. 40. Denver Broncos: Boye Mafe, EDGE, Minnesota Boye Mafe is another riser candidate at EDGE this offseason. He's a tremendous character off the field, but his upside between the hashes is just as exciting. Mafe has a reported 4.57 40-yard dash and a 40.5-inch vertical at 6'4", 265 pounds. There aren't many with his raw potential. 41. Seattle Seahawks: Roger McCreary, CB, Auburn Seattle's cornerback room was as thin as four-men deep at times this past season. They'll need to hit that position hard in the offseason. Roger McCreary is a great get in Round 2. He has great footwork off the line and uses his burst and physicality to disrupt at the catch point. In Washington's much-hyped defensive renaissance under Ron Rivera, one position was consistently neglected: Safety. Kamren Curl is a great matchup piece, but Washington needs a rangy player over top. Jaquan Brisker has the athleticism, length, and spatial awareness to deliver. 43. Atlanta Falcons: Matt Corral, QB, Ole Miss If there's going to be a QB that slips into Round 2 this offseason, it could be Matt Corral. He's the only first-round candidate not at an all-star game. He's also coming off an injury and has fielded durability concerns with his lighter frame. But with his creation capacity and arm talent, Atlanta is willing to pounce on the value. 44. Cleveland Browns: Sam Williams, EDGE, Ole Miss Character evaluations will be the biggest stepping stone for Sam Williams this offseason. But if he checks off that box, he's a top-50 talent through and through. He's an explosive, powerful athlete at 6'4", 265 pounds, and his 12.5 sacks in 2021 are proof of his ability. 45. Baltimore Ravens: Trevor Penning, OT, Northern Iowa Trevor Penning could use the Senior Bowl to vault into Round 1. However, the showcase could also expose his relative lack of refinement against superior competition. He's a good athlete with suffocating strength and aggression regardless, and will have starting upside for Baltimore. 46. Minnesota Vikings: Jermaine Johnson II, EDGE, Florida State Pass rush and coverage are two departments that work in tandem with one another. The problem with Minnesota is that they've had neither in recent years. Jermaine Johnson II could fix that. Johnson's a well-rounded rusher with strength, urgency, and a defined arsenal of moves. 47. Indianapolis Colts: Martin Emerson, CB, Mississippi State The Colts have bigger needs, but it's exciting to think about what a tandem of Martin Emerson and Rock Ya-Sin could do on the boundary. Throw in Pro Bowl slot defender Kenny Moore and Isaiah Rodgers, and this secondary could give offenses fits. 48. Los Angeles Chargers: Logan Hall, DL, Houston The Chargers may have missed out on their nose tackle in Round 1, but they can get a near-perfect fit at 3-technique in Logan Hall with their second-round pick. Hall has the versatility to shade outside, but his burst, power, and violence shine especially bright on the interior. Round 2 | Picks 49-64 Here's who closes out Round 2 of this 2022 NFL Mock Draft. 49. New Orleans Saints: David Bell, WR, Purdue If a team is going to take a chance on Ridder as a starting quarterback, then there can't be any cut corners when it comes to support. David Bell can be a reliable target for Ridder. He has the body control and instincts to contort for passes that aren't pinpoint accurate. 50. Miami Dolphins: Kenneth Walker III, RB, Michigan State No one can dispute that the Dolphins need to upgrade their offensive line. But the Dolphins could also use a running back who can create when nothing is there for him. Enter Kenneth Walker III, who — with his instincts, agility, and contact balance — may be the best pure runner in the 2022 NFL Draft. 51. Philadelphia Eagles: John Metchie III, WR, Alabama PFN Chief Draft Analyst Tony Pauline recently reported that John Metchie III is on track to a full recovery after tearing his ACL in the SEC Championship Game. When healthy, Metchie is a dynamic receiver with solid three-level ability and strong hands — something the Eagles could use. 52. Pittsburgh Steelers: Nicholas Petit-Frere, OT, Ohio State Nicholas Petit-Frere gets a bad rap for some of his worse performances. To be fair, he is a bit of a work in progress. But the tools are there to mold, and the Steelers were able to get something out of Dan Moore Jr. in his rookie year. Petit-Frere also has LT-RT versatility and may project better on the right side opposite Moore. 53. Las Vegas Raiders: Phidarian Mathis, DT, Alabama Some pieces on the Raiders' interior defensive line performed better than expected in 2021. Nevertheless, they still have room to add more talent. Phidarian Mathis is an alignment-versatile lineman with burst, power, and a tireless motor. 54. New England Patriots: Quay Walker, LB, Georgia When you think of what Bill Belichick can do with versatile linebackers, it's not hard to imagine the possibilities with Quay Walker. Walker is strong, built like an edge rusher at 6'4", 240 pounds, with impressive athleticism in space. He could develop into a valuable chess piece. 55. Arizona Cardinals: Zion Johnson, G, Boston College Zion Johnson slipped down the board a bit in this 2022 NFL Mock Draft — perhaps a bit further than he should have. Johnson has a great mix of natural leverage and elite proportional length, using it to his advantage in the trenches. 56. Dallas Cowboys: Travis Jones, DT, Connecticut If you need a nose tackle and can't get Jordan Davis, this is your consolation prize. Travis Jones may not get as much hype as Davis, but he's a huge 6'5", 333-pound space-eater with eye-catching athleticism. He's a great run defender, with some pass-rush upside. 57. Buffalo Bills: Brecee Hall, RB, Iowa State You feel that? No, that's not the cold Buffalo breeze. That's Brecee Hall blazing by a defender on his way to a game-winning touchdown. Hall isn't quite as physical as his frame indicates, but he has the explosiveness, creative capacity, and full-field vision to bring Buffalo's running game to new heights. 58. Atlanta Falcons (from TEN): Kyler Gordon, CB, Washington Imagine watching your first read get erased from existence by A.J. Terrell, and then you go to your second read, only to find Kyler Gordon blanketing him as well. With his efficiency of motion and elite athleticism, that's the peak outcome that Gordon provides. 59. Green Bay Packers: Cameron Thomas, EDGE, San Diego State The future remains uncertain on the edge for the Packers, but it doesn't have to be that way. Adding 6'5", 270-pound MWC standout Cameron Thomas is one way to quell concerns. Thomas has great power and drive, and can use his hands to capitalize at the apex. 60. Tampa Bay Buccaneers: Isaiah Spiller, RB, Texas A&M The Buccaneers could try and bring a running back or two back in free agency, but they should have some nice value opportunities late in Round 2. With his elusiveness, creative instincts, and physical edge, Isaiah Spiller could go off in this offense. 61. San Francisco 49ers: Drake Jackson, EDGE, USC The pass rush is a unit you never want to neglect if you can help it. In this deep EDGE class, it'll be easy for the 49ers to get a value deal on Day 2. Drake Jackson still has the upside that enamored scouts with him before the season, and his ceiling is high opposite Nick Bosa. 62. Cincinnati Bengals: Perrion Winfrey, DT, Oklahoma The Bengals have been getting stellar play out of nose tackle D.J. Reader and Larry Ogunjobi. Ogunjobi, however, could be gone in free agency. Perrion Winfrey could be an able replacement. He's an explosive, twitchy defensive tackle with great pass-rush upside. 63. Denver Broncos (from DEN): Abraham Lucas, OT, Washington State This tackle class is strong up top, but it's not quite as deep as previously thought. You'd think a player like Abraham Lucas would have more hype in this class, but he doesn't. He can change that at the Senior Bowl, however. A natural right tackle, he should be on Denver's radar. 64. Kansas City Chiefs: Christian Watson, WR, North Dakota State I'm worried I gave fellow NFL Draft Analyst Oliver Hodgkinson a heart attack out of excitement with this fit, but it's a risk I'm willing to take. Christian Watson can introduce himself to the scouting world at the Senior Bowl, and his rare athleticism as a RAC threat is a perfect fit in Kansas City.
